Conflicting Views On Balmain Traffic

A sharp division of opinion has arisen among observers in Balmain regarding the effect of shipping moves on the peninsula's road traffic problem. Concern recently expressed by aldermen, the Member for Balmain (Mr Degen, M.L.A.) and "The Link" is not shared by the local police.

Sergeant Quigg, senior traffic officer of the Balmain district, told "The Link" on Friday that they had found no problems arising from the new Mort Bay container terminal.

Access to and exit from the terminal were proceeding smoothly.

He considered the times of arrival of the container vessels were so staggered that they had no real effect upon the situation, and he had found no undue generation of traffic.

When things settled down, he said, this condition would be more marked.

"At present there is nothing to throw hands in the air about", the sergeant said.

"Drivers generally move out via College, Rowntree, Darling, Montague, Mullens and Robert Streets, which appears to be the most practical route".

One-Way

Sergt. Quigg said the police were investigating the suggestion made by "The Link" for the institution of a one-way traffic scheme for cross-peninsula traffic.

In order to recommend such a move it was necessary to anticipate a definite result. Nothing had as yet been decided.

Ald. I. Wyner disagrees with the police regarding the route travelled by most of the container traffic.

He says most of it travels up and down Mort Street. He cannot understand why the police have refused Leichhardt Council's request for the placing of a Stop sign at the intersection of Church Street and Curtis Road.

At last week's meeting of Council — which has already decided to ask the police to reconsider its attitude — Ald. Wyner asked that the matter be reviewed by the Parking Committee.

This was agreed to by Council.

The Empress

The Balmain aldermen are worried at the possibility of the Tasmanian car ferry, the Empress of Australia, ceasing to be an essentially tourist vessel and becoming a cargo ship only.

This course has been hinted at following the continued industrial trouble between the ship's stewards and the Australian National Line.

At last week's meeting of Leichhardt Council, Ald. Wyner and Ald. Origlass expressed uneasiness at the "Seeming

NOT ENOUGH ROAD!

Balmain police have not received a report of an incident in Beattie Street last Thursday, at 4.45 p.m., involving a container-carrying truck and a bus.

"The Link" was informed that the two vehicles became jammed when trying to pass each other, cars being parked both sides of the street.

The two vehicles just "ran out of road".

lack of concern" by the A.N.L. to effect a settlement of its fight with the ship's stewards and the continuing use of the Empress as a purely cargo vessel.

They moved that the A.N.L. be written to immediately to ascertain its intention, having regard to the fact that its development application in 1963, seeking to establish its Mort Bay berth, was based on the claim that the predominant use of the vessel would be for passengers rather than cargo.

The motion was defeated by 8 votes to 6, the three aldermen outside Balmain to support the Balmain votes being those from Leichhardt ward.

The Mayor (Ald. Rodwell), and Aldermen Smith and Wilson (Annandale) refrained from voting, while Ald. Brady

COUNCIL BARES TEETH AT THOUGHT OF TERMINAL "CLADDING"

Leichhardt Council decided last week to oppose strongly any effort by the Maritime Services board to "clad" (enclose) any further section of the White Bay container terminal.

Of the total length of 690 feet, which had been approved by the Minister for Local Government originally, only 330 feet is "clad".

The closing in of the terminal building is considered by many to be responsible for accentuating the operating noises emerging from the area.

was made after a letter had been read from the Premier (Mr Askin) which advised that the Maritime Services Board did not have before it any proposal to extend the building further.

The Council's Town Planner, Mr A. Kenna, reported to Council that while the Minister for Local Government had given approval for construction of the building, (Annandale) was absent.

After the meeting Ald. Origlass told "The Link" that he regretted that the majority of aldermen were still reluctant to judge an issue on its merits.

He thought it inevitable that the conversion of the Empress to a purely cargo-carrying role would increase the heavy transport problem in the unsuitable Balmain streets.

It accented the realistic nature of the demand by the people of Balmain for something to be done by the authorities to ease the situation.

Ald. Origlass added that it was regrettable that the result of the feasibility survey promised by the A.N.L. of the carriage by water of goods bound for the Mort Bay container terminal had not been announced.

He feared that this was an ominous sign, that matter should have been dealt with by the Council itself, under Part XIIA of the Local Government Act.

The Board had been advised to that effect on several occasions, said Mr Kenna. However, the building was an accomplished fact.

Nevertheless Council should strongly oppose ing 360 ft. of open section.

His report was adopted.

Ald. N. Origlass (Balmain ward) during discussion of the report compared the M.S.B.'s present-day attitude towards local Councils with its former one in which it had refused to consult Leichhardt Council in regard to the interests of the Balmain people.

He quoted from a St. George district paper in which the President of the M.S.B., Mr W. H.

Brotherson, had said that the Board had met representatives of the four local Councils fronting Botany Bay and fully explained what it had in mind in regard to development of that port.

erson added, would keep all interested parties informed.

Ald. Origlass said the inference must be plain that this desirable change in the attitude of the M.S.B. was not unconnected with the campaign waged by Balmain aldermen in recognition of the citizens' rights against statutory authorities in the past few years in Balmain.

Building Your Own Home

"Owner-builders" should be excluded from provisions of compulsory registration of builders now being considered by a Parliamentary Committee.

This is the view of Ald. F. J. Purdue, President of the Local Government Association.

An owner-builder is one who decides to build his own house to minimise costs.

Ald. Purdue said that because owner-builders usually had limited experience in the building industry, Councils had developed a practice of giving them every possible assistance in their own interests.

This would continue if registration were adopted.

FUNDS FOR LEGACY

Torch Bearers for Legacy raised a record amount of $241,858 in 1969.

Mrs W. Harrison, M.B.E., of Ryde, a Vice-president of the Torch Bearers, handed over a cheque for this amount to the Vice-president of Sydney Legacy, Mr A. J. McMurchie, at the annual meeting recently.

Mrs Lionel McFadyen, O.B.E., was re-elected President of Torch Bearers for the 22nd successive year. Mrs J. Dyneley Fell was re-elected honorary Secretary, and Mrs D. Gibson Honorary Treasurer.

Column NINE

CONTAINER TRAFFIC

The lack of concern shown by the local police over the problems of Mort Bay container traffic has nonplussed this paper.

"Nothing to throw hands up in the air about" is the verdict of the Traffic Sergeant.

Police are, of course, traffic experts (or should be), and we must ascribe full importance to this verdict.

Nevertheless we feel they are looking at the question from a different standpoint than local residents and those who regard residential amenity as of more importance.

The problems involving the container traffic are the sheer size and number of the trucks, conflict with other traffic, accident possibilities, and the presence of parked cars along their routes — streets built purely for a residential area, and in themselves completely unsuitable for heavy transport.

These problems are important enough to demand close and immediate attention from all authorities, including the Department of Main Roads and Department of Motor Transport.

The police appear to be watching the situation carefully, but we haven't heard a word from the others.

Neither are we satisfied with the strength of the statement issued last week by Mr Roger Degen, M.L.A. We expected far more aggression than this milk-and-water effort.

Meanwhile residents could help by advising us of snarls created by the container trucks. Write us a letter for publication describing what you have seen.

This evidence could be valuable in persuading the authorities that they could well be fiddling while Rome burns.

Local Government Politics

The Leichhardt Council "majority" may be true-blue Labor men, following the principle that it's a good thing to have a Labor administration at all levels of Government, but . . . !

The "But" was seen at a recent meeting of Council when the Balmain "rebels"—Ald. Wyner, Origlass and Graham—tried to get the majority to support the Leader of the State Opposition (Mr Pat Hills) in his views on a Local Government matter.

Nothing doing! Council threw the "Rebels" idea out.

The matter arose when a letter from North

Sydney Council was read. This asked Leichhardt for support in an approach to the State Government on the question of giving citizens the right of appeal against municipal councils' decisions on development applications.

The majority decided merely to "receive and note" the letter.

Ald. N. Origlass moved an amendment that Council receive and note the letter, and as well indicate that it supported Mr Hills in his professed intention to urge in Parliament that this right of appeal be given to citizens. The amendment was defeated.

RESIDENTS OPPOSE UNIT PLAN

Sixteen residents of Fitzroy Avenue, Balmain, presented a petition last week to Leichhardt Council opposing the proposal to erect six residential flat buildings containing 80 2-bedroom units in Fitzroy Avenue.

The proposal had been favoured by the Council at its February 3 meeting, and forwarded to the State Planning Authority and the Police Department for their views.

The proposal was contained in a development application by Parkes (Sydney) Pty. Ltd.

The project would cost more than a million dollars. It embraces the whole of the 1½ acres of land owned by S. G. White Pty. Ltd., marine engineers and boiler makers, and will face the harbour.

The petitioners submitted that the State Planning Authority should not accept the Council's proposed zoning of the area as Residential 2 (b).

They pointed out that the S.P.A. in its outline plan for the years 1970-2000 stated that it meant to preserve harbour foreshores and waterways as open spaces.

The petitioners said that the Leichhardt area required eight times more parkland than it had at present, and the population was increasing.

They estimated that the average permanent car population would be 120 for the 80 flats, plus a floating visiting car population of 300 per week.

The proposed use, they said, would be against the public recreational amenity in view of the vicinity of the Elkington Park baths.

Their objections to the development were summed up as follows:

1. It would destroy Fitzroy Avenue.

2. It would inhibit views which had commercial value.

3. It would cause traffic chaos from a parking viewpoint.

4. It would create a death and injury risk to dozens of children.

Council received the petition and adopted a statement by the Town Planner (Mr Kenna) that he expected to submit a report to Council on the subject at its next meeting.

Health Officer Advises On Hepatitis

An increase in the number of hepatitis cases is expected by Dr. W. Lopez, Division of Epidemiology, State Health Department.

Substantial increases in the fly population generally occur during the warm humid conditions which follow summer rain, and flies are one of the factors in the spread of hepatitis, he says.

During the first nine months of last year 2,008 cases, including 10 deaths, were reported in New South Wales.

Six of the deaths were recorded in the metropolitan area.

Symptoms

Infectious hepatitis is a virus disease which attacks the liver.

It discolours the skin and whites of the eyes.

The discolouration is called jaundice.

This, however, is only one of the symptoms of hepatitis.

Other symptoms include loss of appetite, weariness, nausea, pain or discomfort in the abdomen, sometimes vomiting and diarrhoea, and headaches and depression.

A fever is common at the onset, but seldom lasts more than a few days.

Infectious hepatitis, says Dr. Lopez, is usually spread by close personal contact.

The disease attacks people of all ages, but is especially common among children and adolescents. Almost one in every three cases occur in children between five and nine years old.

The disease may be spread rapidly by contaminated food or drink. Any increase in the fly population also increases the risk of contaminating food.

Doctors believe the virus enters the body through the mouth.

Medical treatment is necessary in cases of hepatitis.

Personal hygiene is of great importance in controlling the spread of the disease.

Whether or not the disease is prevalent in the locality, this three-point plan should be carried out:

- Wash hands before eating,
- Wash your hands after each visit to the toilet,
- Protect food from flies.

Clean food handling in school canteens is essential to prevent the spread of hepatitis.

In School

Voluntary workers in school canteens who have children at home suffering from hepatitis or gastro intestinal illness should not work in the canteen until advised by a doctor that it is safe to do so.

Infected children should not be allowed to attend school until passed fit by a doctor. Contacts, however, can attend school without any danger to other children.

Close contacts of a case should consult their doctor regarding the advisability of receiving a protective injection.

Care With Hot Car Radiators

The N.R.M.A. says drivers can be severely scalded on the face, arms and body if they lift the cap off a hot pressurised radiator without taking proper precautions.

Manufacturers' handbooks state that pressure caps should be removed "slowly".

The N.R.M.A. says the cooling systems of most modern cars are pressurised up to 14 lb. per square inch or more, so that the motor will run more efficiently.

Pressurisation, however, means that the boiling point of the cooling water is raised at the same time, as water under pressure boils at temperatures higher than the normal 212° F.

Two Positions

The caps of pressurised radiators have two release positions.

The first allows pressure to escape down the overflow, the second allows the cap to come off.

To remove the cap of a hot motor, twist it to the first position and let it stand for a few minutes, so that the pressure can escape and the boiling subside, before turning it to its final release position.

The engine should be allowed to cool before it is topped up with cold water.

The metal in a hot motor will cool too suddenly as the cold water strikes it, which could cause expensive fractures in the engine block and head.

Stay Awake At Wheel

Doctors have found that stimulated feet help keep drivers alert when driving long distances, says the N.R.M.A.

By removing his shoes and driving in stockings feet for short periods a driver can help himself stay awake and alert.

Other aids suggested are to keep fresh air coming into the car, play the radio loudly, chew gum or sing to yourself.

Best thing, however, is to pull off the road for a short nap when you get drowsy, and resume travel when refreshed.
