Get-together Of District Workers

An unprecedented attack on community problems in the Balmain area appears to be approaching, with a further extension of activity by The Balmain Association and its approach to the two newly formed organisations (Rotaract Club and Junior Chamber of Commerce) in a move to prevent duplication of effort.

Maintaining A Park

Balmain people will be delighted when the present work by the Maritime Services Board at Peacock Point will have transformed an eyesore area into one of the finest harbourside parks in Sydney.

Leichhardt Council would not have had the finances or possibly the desire to produce such an impressive effort.

Undoubtedly the Council's engineer is right in saying that the park will be expensive to maintain, and the question is whether Council should be expected to do so, out of its own resources.

Should Council accept the offer to take out a lease, it would have to do a proper maintenance job and never allow a repetition of the conditions which caused the complaints some months ago of slummed work by its maintenance staff.

Those complaints fortunately have ceased, and the new policy of making one man responsible for each area appears to be thoroughly successful.

Nevertheless the new park would add considerably to Council's maintenance bill, and the M.S.B. would be realistic in recognising that.

Reading thro u g h the lines of the Council's engineer's report, it seems obvious the Board had little confidence early in Council's ability to handle the project.

To put the picture right, satisfy any Council umbrage at the Board's earlier attitude, and complete its idea of a handsome gift to Balmain, why not a token M.S.B. donation to Council for maintenance?

The Board is not noted for making friends in Balmain. Such a move could help to overtake past defects in policy.

Two months later

Council asked for a conference regarding the conditions, but the Board then withdrew its offer of a lease and said it would proceed with development of the park at its own cost.

Withdrawn

The Board said it was motivated entirely by safety considerations and would not permit the point to be used for boat launching because the location was in the busiest commercial section of the harbour.

Council then told the Board it was satisfied with the decision, but asked whether the Board would undertake the park's maintenance.

The Board replied that the park would be maintained by its own staff.

In July this year the Board advised Council that the reserve had been designed to a high standard for pedestrian use only, utilising Australiana botanical features, and would be named "Illoura Reserve" (an aboriginal name for "Pleasant Place").

It suggested that Council take out a lease of the park.

In his report to Council. Mr Wilson said administration and maintenance of the area would involve considerable labour cost because of the nature of the development.

Had Council developed the area the maintenance would have been an important design consideration.

Council had had no share in the design, despite its suggestion that the Board confer with him on the subject. However, he had a favourable feeling for the design, which in some respects was excellent, but thought it a pity that opportunity had not been taken to use the place name "Peacock Point", with its local historical significance.
